Homestay Diary

● June 13

It's my first week in the United States and my first time in another country. Everything is new and unusual to me. It's great to be here. I hope I do well!

● June 25

I live with a family: Cindy, Thomas and their daughter Mia. They're really nice, and every day I learn something new. For example, this morning Cindy said, "Thomas and I work late, and I can't cook tonight. Help yourself to anything for dinner."

I didn't understand Cindy. I thought she wanted to help me with dinner. So I bought takeout food for everyone. When Cindy came home, she said, "Daniela, ()? We have a lot." I explained. She said, "'Help yourself' means 'eat anything you want.'" I was confused! We laughed and ate the Chinese food.

● July 1

My best friend from Brazil called me today. I was really happy to talk to her, but after, I felt kind of down. Everything here is so different from home – the food, the people, even the weather (It gets cold here in the summer sometimes!).

● July 5

Yesterday was Independence Day. It's a big holiday here. My host family had a barbecue in their garden. Their friends and neighbors came. Everyone was very friendly and warm. Later, I went with some friends from school to watch the fireworks, and then we went dancing. It was fun!

10 次の英文を読んで、あとの問いに答えなさい。

My name is Jen and I have one of the most interesting jobs a person could have. I train dogs to help people with special needs. I teach dogs how to be the eyes, hands, and ears for people with disabilities. Most importantly, I prepare them to be good friends to those in need.

① I train Guide dogs, Hearing dogs, Service dogs, and Therapy dogs. ② All of these dogs (people / help / to / skills / have / special). The people they help are known as “handlers”.

Guide dogs help people who are blind or have difficulty seeing. It takes about 6 months to train them. These amazing animals make sure that their handlers keep safe when they move around or walk in busy areas.

Hearing dogs are friends to people who are deaf or have weak hearing. They help their handlers by letting them know when an alarm sounds or when traffic is close by. You can find a Hearing dog by its orange leash and collar.

③ Service dogs need a whole year of training to learn how to meet the needs of their handlers. They help people who have difficulty moving by themselves. They are trained to pull wheelchairs, turn on or off the lights, and open doors. They are also trained to get things and call for help in an emergency.

Therapy dogs are trained to be kind to people. They must like people and not shed too much fur. They are used in hospitals and senior homes to bring a smile to those who are lonely or sad. It has been clear that being with a Therapy dog can help lower a person's blood pressure.

I really enjoy training assistance dogs. It is hard work but the rewards are amazing.
